Our main purpose is to perpetuate for future generations the Okazaki style of traditional Japanese Restorative Massage Therapy / Seifhukujitsu.

Introduction

The Okazaki style of Restorative Massage Therapy is a component of the comprehensive Seifhukujitsu healing arts system (see below) that contains ancient, effective healing techniques handed down for many generations through traditional Asian martial arts systems. It is based upon TCM (Traditional Chinese Medicine) theory. The format used in this series of Courses is designed to bring these (until recently, closely guarded, secret) techniques to contemporary, professional therapists in a therapeutic / medical massage format designed for 21st century application.

These Courses emphasize learning practical, hands-on knowledge and techniques that will enable the participant to better attract, serve, and retain both new and existing clients. Our goal is to further the knowledge and skills of participants to produce results in the real world of medical massage; and results are what make you a business success at massage.

The method, style, and spirit of instruction follows the traditional philosophy taught by Master Okazaki at his school, the Kodenkan (The School of the Ancient Tradition), where senior students helped to teach junior students in the spirit that Master Okazaki declared was inherent in the Hawaiian word Kokua, to help another; or to work together / to help one another.

These courses are designed to meet the Continuing Education requirements of professional massage therapists; however, they are open to martial artists / anyone with an interest in massage / healing arts. They serve as an introduction to the Okazaki style of Seifhukujitsu.

History

Master Henry Seishiro Okazaki, the founder of the Dan Zan Ryu (Cedar Mountain Style/School), was born on the island of Honshu, Japan, Jan. 28, 1890. He emigrated to Hawaii in 1906. When he was 19 years old (1910), he became ill on the island of Hilo and was diagnosed by a doctor to have been suffering from incurable tuberculosis. This motivated him to begin upon a path that he would pursue for the rest of his life, which he described in a scroll given to one of his students as follows.

“With the courage born out of desperation, I ... started to practice jujitsu in earnest and in defiance of death. My frantic efforts and devotion to jujitsu not only miraculously healed my tuberculosis, but also enabled me to develop a strong, iron-like body...

I then realized that I owed my life completely to jujitsu, and decided to devote the rest of my life to the teaching and promotion of jujitsu.”

Master Okazaki proceeded to practice diligently 6 nights a week and learned several jujitsu styles as well as several other martial arts. In 1924 he returned temporarily to Japan in order to improve his system and made an exhaustive study of several jujitsu ryu while traveling extensively; he visited more than 50 jujitsu dojos (schools) and acquired 675 different techniques or forms. He made a special study of Kappo and Seifhukujitsu (see below), because he recognized the virtue of jujitsu lay in the possibility of reversing the effects of deadly or disabling arts by restoration and treatment. He returned from Japan in 1925 and started to teach his jujutsu system.

Master Okazaki stressed the ancient systems of philosophical and moral training (see the Esoteric Principles) while retaining the best of the arts of self-defense and of restoration together as a system of physical culture and mental cultivation. Thus, he achieved a true synthesis of ancient and modern elements.

In 1930 Master Okazaki opened the Nikko (rays of the sun) Sanatorium of Restoration Massage, also known as the Okazaki Seifhukujitsu In (Okazaki Alignment and Restoration Clinic) in Honolulu, where he subsequently earned an international reputation for his skill as a physical therapist.

Many people, including President Franklin D. Roosevelt, came to the Sanatorium with so-called incurable disorders. It is reported that President Roosevelt offered Okazaki a job at the White House as his private therapist. Okazaki declined the offer.

Okazaki also opened his school, the Kodenkan Dojo, that same year. Kodenkan, the name of Master Okazaki's physical school, may be translated as The School of the Ancient Tradition, and in fact the Kodenkan system is a synthesis of the best arts of the ancient jujitsu schools. However, Kodenkan may also be rendered as The School in which Seniors Transmit the Tradition.

This translation describes the Kodenkan method of instruction, senior students teach junior students in the spirit which Master Okazaki declared was inherent in the Hawaiian word Kokua, to help another; or to work together / to help one another.

Okazaki was one of the first teachers to break with tradition by teaching Japanese martial arts to non-Japanese. For this he was severely reprimanded by his instructors, and was ostracized by other Japanese. However, from the founding of the Kodenkan Dojo forward, Master Okazaki's life was devoted to instructing worthy Americans without regard to national origin, race, or sex in the arts and sciences of jujitsu; because of Okazaki's belief that everyone should have the opportunity to learn Jujutsu, regardless of their heritage, he developed many disciples who would introduce his system throughout the United States.

It is safe to say that when Master Okazaki died on July 12, 1951, thousands of students had studied in his school.

On the mainland over the years, a number of disciples who Master Okazaki had initiated into the highest arts of the DAN ZAN RYU system began to teach and attempted to make a reality of Master Okazaki's dream to have a school teaching his system in every state of the Union. One of the first, Professor Ray L. Law established the Oakland (CA.) Judo School in 1939, and was followed shortly by Professor Bud Estes, Professor Richard Rickerts and Professor John Cahill. Others followed and taught over the years, and today, there are a variety of organizations, founded by different Okazaki students, dedicated to perpetuating their interpretation of his system.

The Seifhukujitsu System Defined

(in brief)

Seifhukujitsu is the long-life restoration therapy practiced and taught by Henry Seishiro Okazaki at his clinic and dojo in Honolulu.

Seifhukujitsu means “alignment and restoration techniques.”

Seifhukujitsu is not just massage which is, in actuality, merely a part of this broader, umbrella term; it also includes specific regimens for specific ailments, stretching / alignment techniques, bone-setting techniques (Sekkotsu), and resuscitation techniques (kappo). Thus, it is more accurately rendered in English as “Restoration Therapy” or “Restorative Massage Therapy” which reflects the overall spirit and goal of the system: to return/restore the injured or diseased person to an original state of well-being.

General seifhukujitsu principles are:

- Balance the body - The therapy focuses on the major energy flow lines used in other methods based upon TCM (Traditional Chinese Medicine) theory such as acupuncture, acupressure, tui na, shiatsu, etc.
- Break Down/Build Up - The therapy is a deep-tissue massage that releases lacto-carbonic acid. The body then rebuilds its tissue to a stronger state over time.

The technique of Seifhukujitsu is to primarily use the crux of the elbow rather than the hands. This is done with an ironing and rocking motion and not rubbing. Advertisements in the Hawaiian phone book specifically note H. S. Okazaki’s famous “Elbow System”.

Some Thoughts About Okazaki And His System

One of the first things that becomes apparent to anyone who examines Master Okazaki's life is what an exceptional man he was in so many different ways.

Imagine the challenge of leaving your homeland, traveling thousands of miles to a new country, and learning another language.

Imagine the resolve and effort required to overcome a major, life threatening illness.

Imagine the effort that is required to study, practice, and teach martial and healing arts virtually every day of your adult life.

Imagine being a Japanese and being accepted at first as a serious student and later as an accomplished expert and teacher in arts taught by Chinese, Phillipinos, Okinawans, and Americans.

Imagine the motivation and dedication to study ancient systems of knowledge and having the foresight to recognize and organize them in a coherent fashion to be able to better preserve and teach them to others.

Imagine being the first to unveil and freely share knowledge that has been closely guarded and veiled in secrecy for centuries.

Imagine being the first to teach these ancient arts to students without regard to their race, sex, or national origin.

Imagine having the maturity and depth to understand the martial art / healing art connection.

Now go from imagining these things to making them a reality; that is what Master Okazaki did.

Reasons To Study the Okazaki System

1. To help another.
2. To help oneself.
3. Perpetuate a tradition of knowledge that has existed for thousands of years.

Master/Disciple Teaching Model

It has long been recognized in both Eastern and Western cultures that the one-on-one master/disciple relationship is the optimum learning method; especially for disciplines of great depth that require a great deal of time and effort to learn. This is particularly true of artistic endeavors that require an intuitive “feel;” studies of philosophies, the understandings of which require time to unfold and mature; and medical studies where attention to detail and precision are essential. These characteristics describe the depth and breadth of Asian therapies.

Our goal is to teach individuals the knowledge and skills to produce results in the real world of medical massage; and results are what make you a business success at massage. More specifically, our Continuing Education Courses are meant to introduce the student to the Okazaki system, and thereby help them to achieve business success in real life.

Some of the most important elements in determining what any individual will gain from any academic educational experience are the size of the class, the amount of time the student spends with the instructor, and the experience and level of expertise of the instructor. Our programs of instruction are organized and presented in a manner consistent with traditional methods of instruction. This means:

1. our CE Course class size is no larger than 20 students per instructor / supervisor per class;
2. each student receives individual attention from the senior instructor;
3. the senior instructor has over 48 years of experience.

Beyond our Continuing Education Courses, the program of instruction at the Martial Arts Academy is designed to offer the student in-depth immersion and hands-on instruction in the Okazaki style of traditional Japanese deep-tissue, Restorative Massage Therapy at all levels, from Basic to Advanced Instructor. The teaching / learning approach, style, and methods are most closely akin to, and modeled after, the uchi-deshi (live-in student) model found in traditional Japanese arts; i.e. the master carefully chooses/selects students with whom he is willing to spend considerable private lesson time and effort to teach (inquire for details).

All of this means we want the student to succeed.

The Instructors

Few people understand the history, legacy, and importance of the martial art / healing art connection; Gary Lescak has spent over 48 years studying the subject and continues to do so. He began his study of massage in 1967 in conjunction with the beginning of his martial arts education. As part of learning Dan Zan Ryu ju-jitsu, he has studied the Okazaki style of traditional Japanese deep-tissue, Restorative Massage Therapy as part of the broader Seifhukujitsu program of instruction which also includes stretching / alignment techniques, resuscitation techniques (Kappo), specific massage techniques for specific ailments, bone setting (Sekkotsu), and Lomi-Lomi (Hawaiian massage). Gary holds the title of Professor that, by definition, indicates a complete knowledge of the entire system (ryu) as well as the ability to teach its contents. He is also a certified Okazaki style restoration therapy instructor (1997) from the Kodenkan International Martial Arts Inc. of Costa Rica, and a certified Senior Advanced Instructor by an original Okazaki student with over 60 years experience. He is currently the Director & Principal Instructor at the Martial Arts Academy, where he teaches the Okazaki Style of Restorative Massage Therapy and Dan Zan Ryu jujitsu. He is also a Licensed Massage Therapist, State of Georgia; Licensed Massage and Bodywork Therapist, State of North Carolina; and a Certified member, Associated Bodywork and Massage Professionals.

From 1999 to 2012, Gary owned, operated, and was the principal instructor for The Martial Arts Academy, Inc. School of Massage that he founded and where he taught the first and only State Licensing Board “Recognized” Massage Therapy Educational Program leading to professional licensure in the Okazaki Style of Restorative Massage Therapy in the United States. In order to teach this 738 hour Course, Gary’s instructor credentials were examined by members of the Georgia State Board of Massage Therapy, and he personally was approved as an instructor in all areas of the basic 500 hour program required for state professional licensure as part of his school approval. In addition, he has taught a 540 hour Intermediate Course and a 540 hour Advanced Course in Okazaki Restorative Massage Therapy that was approved by the Georgia Nonpublic Postsecondary Education Commission (NPEC).

Kathy Lescak began her formal study of massage and traditional Asian healing arts in 1977 in conjunction with the beginning of her martial arts education. As part of learning Dan Zan Ryu ju-jitsu, she has studied the Okazaki style of traditional Japanese deep-tissue, Restorative Massage Therapy in which she is a certified, Senior Advanced Instructor. Kathy has studied and learned by means of the traditional master/disciple apprenticeship method; until very recently, these healing arts were surrounded by secrecy and only taught to black belt holders in Dan Zan Ryu jujitsu.

She has also studied, practiced, and taught TCM (Traditional Chinese Medicine) and various other traditional Eastern healing modalities for more than 38 years.

CE Course #2: Introduction to the Okazaki Long-Life Restorative Massage Kata (Form) Part 2

Number of Continuing Education hours: 13 (Each Course).

Length of course: 2 days (Each Course).

Course Descriptions

The Okazaki Long-Life Restorative Massage Kata (Form) is an application of over 57 specific techniques organized into a distinctive and unique full-body massage that provides an introduction to, and the theoretical and practical foundation for, the remainder of the Okazaki style of traditional Japanese deep-tissue, restorative massage therapy / Seifhukujitsu. Part 1 teaches approximately half the sequence. Part 2 teaches the second half of the sequence.

It is the basis for a mentally and physically relaxing, deep tissue massage as part of a wellness lifestyle. It is an excellent vehicle for initial assessment in medical massage. It is the “original” sports massage. It is the application of TCM theory and the fundamental Seifhukujitsu principles resulting in an energy balancing, and is the necessary prerequisite to the application of the Okazaki style stretching / alignment techniques.

Seifhukujitsu is the long-life restoration therapy practiced and taught by Henry Seishiro Okazaki at his clinic and dojo (martial arts school) in Honolulu, Hawaii during the first half of the 20th century. Seifhukujitsu is most accurately rendered in English as “Restoration Therapy” or “Restorative Massage Therapy” which reflects the overall spirit and goal of the system: to return/restore the injured or diseased person to an original state of well-being.

General Seifhukujitsu principles are:

- Balance the body - The therapy focuses on the major energy flow lines used in other methods based upon TCM theory such as acupuncture, acupressure, tui na, shiatsu, etc.
- Break Down/Build Up - The therapy is a deep-tissue massage that releases lacto-carbonic acid. The body then rebuilds its tissue to a stronger state over time.

The Okazaki Long-Life Massage Kata (form) is formulated upon these principles / theoretical foundations.

The technique of Seifhukujitsu is to primarily use the crux of the elbow rather than the hands; learning refined and specialized elbow and forearm techniques are a major focus of these Courses that will enable the therapist to provide a deep-tissue massage with minimal energy expenditure.

Learning Outcomes

Upon completion of CE Courses #1 & #2, the participant will be able to: perform the Basic Okazaki Long-Life Restorative Massage Kata (Form) which consists of the methodical application of over 57 distinct techniques; discuss the application of the knowledge derived from an understanding of the martial art – healing art connection; define and explain Seifhukujitsu; explain fundamental aspects of, and practical applications relating to, the underlying theoretical basis / general Seifhukujitsu principles; explain, discuss, and describe the differences and similarities between an energy explanatory schemata versus the Western allopathic explanatory schemata.

CE Course #3: Okazaki Style Traditional Japanese Basic Stretching / Alignment Techniques

Number of Continuing Education hours: 13

Length of Course: 2 days

Prerequisites: CE Courses #1 & #2

Course Description

This course of instruction is an introduction to the Okazaki Style Traditional Japanese Basic Stretching / Alignment Techniques, and provides the starting point and foundation of the students theoretical and technical knowledge within this part of the Okazaki system of Seifhukujitsu.

Seifhukujitsu is the long-life restoration therapy practiced and taught by Henry Seishiro Okazaki at his clinic and dojo in Honolulu, Hawaii during the first half of the 20th century. In a broad sense, Seifhukujitsu is most accurately rendered in English as “Restoration Therapy” or “Restorative Massage Therapy” which reflects the overall spirit and goal of the system: to return/restore the injured or diseased person to an original state of well-being. However, Seifhukujitsu literally means “alignment and restoration techniques.”

This course is designed to give the student a basic knowledge of the most common alignment conditions and problems / pathologies that he/she will encounter in clinical practice. The student will learn the definitions, signs, and symptoms, both in terms of Eastern and Western explanatory schemata of these conditions / problems, which stretching / alignment technique is indicated for each condition or problem, and appropriate courses of action. The course will also cover universal precautions, contraindications, and specialty considerations in the application of these techniques. The famous stretching / alignment techniques that are a major component of the Dan Zan Ryu / Okazaki style of restorative massage therapy are one of the most unique features of this system and one of the major reasons for achieving successful results. The proper application of these techniques which produce an energy and myoskeletal alignment is designed to result in a state of physical, mental, and energy balancing / harmony / equilibrium.

Learning Outcomes

The participant will be able to: perform at least 10 Okazaki Style Traditional Japanese Basic Stretching / Alignment Techniques; explain the fundamental aspects of the underlying theoretical basis; explain when these techniques are contraindicated; discuss, define, and differentiate between chiropractic and the Okazaki methods of stretching / alignment; and be able to explain and define the importance of these techniques in the Seifhukujitsu program.

CE Course #4

Specialty Techniques & Considerations in Okazaki Style Restorative Massage Therapy / Seifhukujitsu #1

Course Prerequisites: CE Course #3.

Number of continuing education hours: 13

Length of course: 2 days

Course Description

This Course in the continuing series focuses on a comprehensive presentation of the Okazaki style of Restorative Massage Therapy / Seifhukujitsu for the benefit of both the client and the therapist; the client will get maximum / best possible results, and the therapist will improve his/her business. It includes lifestyle education / client orientation, intake practices, and holistic assessment techniques. It also includes Chinese martial arts exercises for restoring function for therapist's personal self-care. In addition, the participant will learn Specialty Massage Techniques / Techniques for Special Problems for the neck, neck specialty exercises, triggers for headaches plus specific answers for each, acupressure relief points for sinus congestion, massage techniques for the head / headache relief, massage techniques for the back, and stretching / alignment techniques for the back.

Learning Outcomes

1. The student will be able to explain and discuss the concept of client lifestyle education as it relates to the presentation of the Okazaki style of

- RMT / Seifhukujitsu, and list 3 components that should be included in the presentation.
2. The student will be able to explain, discuss, and list the 5 components / facets of the Okazaki style approach to medical massage therapy.
  3. The student will be able to list 10 components necessary to, and be able to perform, a comprehensive initial client intake session.
  4. The student will be able to explain, demonstrate, and perform 15 Chinese martial arts exercises for restoring function for therapist's personal self-care.
  5. The student will be able to explain and discuss the theoretical basis of the Okazaki style explanatory model for holistic assessment.
  6. The student will be able to list 3 major components of the practical model for holistic assessment and be able to perform an assessment.
  7. The student will be able to explain, demonstrate, and perform 2 specialty massage techniques / techniques for special problems for the neck.
  8. The student will be able to explain, demonstrate, and perform 4 neck specialty exercises.
  9. The participant will be able to explain 4 triggers for headaches plus be able to explain, demonstrate, and perform 4 specific answers for each.
  10. The student will be able to explain, demonstrate, and perform 3 acupressure relief points for sinus congestion.
  11. The student will be able to explain, demonstrate, and perform 5 massage techniques for the head / headache relief.
  12. The student will be able to explain, demonstrate, and perform 8 massage techniques for the back.
  13. The student will be able to explain, demonstrate, and perform 2 stretching / alignment techniques for the back.

CE Course #5
Specialty Techniques & Considerations in Okazaki Style
Restorative Massage Therapy / Seifhukujitsu #2
Course Prerequisites: CE Course #4.

Number of continuing education hours: 13

Length of course: 2 days

Course Description

This Course in the continuing series from the Okazaki style of Restorative Massage Therapy / Seifhukujitsu focuses on expanding the participants knowledge of specific upper body techniques for the shoulder, arm, elbow, wrist, hand, and finger. It also includes Chinese martial arts exercises for restoring function for therapist's personal self-care. In addition, it introduces energy protection and cleansing techniques and Chi Kung / energy cultivation techniques for therapist's personal self-care.

Learning Outcomes

1. The student will be able to explain, demonstrate, and perform 4 Specialty Massage Techniques / Techniques for Special Problems for the Shoulder.
2. The student will be able to explain, demonstrate, and perform 3 Shoulder stretch techniques.
3. The student will be able to explain, demonstrate, and perform 3 basic stretching / alignment techniques for the shoulder.
4. The student will be able to explain, demonstrate, and perform 5 massage techniques for the arm, elbow, wrist, hand, and finger.
5. The student will be able to explain, demonstrate, and perform 2 stretching / alignment techniques for the elbow & wrist.

Okazaki Style Restorative Massage Therapy / Seifhukujitsu Lower Body Techniques

Course Prerequisites: CE Course #7.

Number of continuing education hours: 24

Length of course: 3 days

Course Description

This course of instruction is an introduction to the Okazaki style of traditional Japanese deep-tissue, restorative massage therapy / Seifhukujitsu by means of the Okazaki Long-Life Massage Kata (form), and provides the starting point and foundation of the students theoretical and technical massage knowledge within the Okazaki system of Seifhukujitsu. This Course teaches approximately half (the lower body portion) of the sequence.

In addition, this Course contains additional lower body specialty massage techniques / techniques for special problems for the lower back, SI, knee, leg, ankle, and foot from the Okazaki style of Restorative Massage Therapy / Seifhukujitsu.

Seifhukujitsu is the long-life restoration therapy practiced and taught by Henry Seishiro Okazaki at his clinic and dojo in Honolulu, Hawaii during the first half of the 20th century. Seifhukujitsu is most accurately rendered in English as “Restoration Therapy” or “Restorative Massage Therapy” which reflects the overall spirit and goal of the system: to return/restore the injured or diseased person to an original state of well-being.

General seifhukujitsu principles are:

- Balance the body - The therapy focuses on the major energy flow lines used in other methods based upon TCM (Traditional Chinese Medicine) theory such as acupuncture, acupressure, tui na, shiatsu, etc.
- Break Down/Build Up - The therapy is a deep-tissue massage that releases lacto-carbonic acid. The body then rebuilds its tissue to a stronger state over time.

The Okazaki Long-Life Massage Kata (form) is formulated upon these principles / theoretical foundations.

The technique of Seifhukujitsu is to primarily use the crux of the elbow rather than the hands. This is done with an ironing and rocking motion and not rubbing. The Okazaki Long-Life Massage Kata (form) is an application of over 57 specific techniques organized into a distinctive and unique full-body massage that provides the theoretical and practical foundation for the remainder of the system.

It is the basis for a mentally and physically relaxing, deep tissue massage as part of a wellness lifestyle. It is the “original” sports massage. It is an excellent vehicle for initial assessment in medical massage. It is the application of TCM theory and the fundamental Seifhukujitsu principles resulting in an energy balancing, and is the necessary prerequisite to the application of the Okazaki style stretching / alignment techniques.

Learning Outcomes

The participant will be able to: perform the second half of the Basic Okazaki Long-Life Restorative Massage Kata (Form) which consists of the methodical application of over 30 distinct techniques; explain at least 2 practical applications relating to the underlying theoretical basis / general Seifhukujitsu principles; further explain, discuss, and describe the differences and similarities between an energy explanatory schemata versus the Western allopathic explanatory schemata; discuss the application of the knowledge derived from an understanding of the martial art – healing art connection; and be able to further define and explain Seifhukujitsu.

In addition:

1. The participant will be able to explain, demonstrate, and perform 5 specialty massage techniques / techniques for special problems for the lower back / SI.
2. The participant will be able to explain, demonstrate, and perform 2 specialty massage techniques / techniques for special problems for the knee.

3. The participant will be able to explain, demonstrate, and perform 3 specialty massage techniques / techniques for special problems for the ankle and foot.

Martial Arts Academy Massage Clinic Information

For most Americans, the world of alternative or complimentary healthcare options is a new, unfamiliar, interesting, hope-inspiring, and confusing marketplace of choices. What we hope to do here (on this website) is to provide you with some general information that will help you make informed decisions about your healthcare options and some specific information about our services.

Our Approach

Our main focus is medical massage. We have worked with clients ranging in age from 4 to 90 years old who have come to us with a wide variety of problems. We are results oriented and will not take you as a client unless we feel we can help you. Quite simply, the overwhelming majority of our clients have soft tissue based problems; an area in which Western medicine falls short. A large number of our clients with whom we have had success have been in pain for substantial lengths of time (as long as 25 years) and many have exhausted all Western medicine options before coming to us.

Our therapy program is a 5 faceted approach, custom tailored for each client. It is, essentially, an Asian / energy based approach assembled by us and reflecting our (combined) over 66 years of experience. The program / approach consists of the following components:

1. Acupuncture / acupressure – This is mainly used for pain relief and to combat inflammation.
2. Seifhukujitsu / Okazaki style, traditional Japanese deep-tissue massage / tui na – This encompasses a wide range and large number of specific deep tissue loosening / relaxing techniques primarily based upon acupuncture theory.
3. Stretching / alignment techniques – Once the tissue is sufficiently relaxed, these techniques allow the body to naturally align itself.
4. Specific exercises for specific problems – The client is taught a progression of specific, mainly stretching, exercises that target his or her specific problems. These exercises come primarily from Chinese martial arts, chi gung, and yoga.

5. Lifestyle assessment and modification – This is an in-depth, on-going assessment to identify the client’s real (not merely symptomatic) problem; as well as an on-going educational process to inform and educate the client about good habits that can be developed and bad habits that can be eliminated.

Typically, our approach is to see a client for an initial appointment, which lasts for 1-1/2 to 2 hours, for an in-depth assessment and “hands-on” therapy session; after which, we see most clients twice a week for a month. We continuously reevaluate the client’s needs.

Most people come to us initially with a medical problem; after their problem is “solved” or becomes manageable (no, we cannot make you 18 again), most of our client’s continue to come on a “maintenance” schedule. They have learned that the answer is to come so you don’t hurt, instead of only coming when you do hurt. Prevention is the best medicine.

We are always happy to provide references from our many satisfied clients. We hope to be able to help you as well.

“Feeling is believing...”

TO OUR VALUED CLIENTS

For most Americans, the world of alternative or complimentary healthcare options is a new, unfamiliar, interesting, hope-inspiring, and confusing marketplace of choices. What we hope to do here is to provide you with some general information that will help you make informed decisions about your healthcare options and some specific information about our services.

IN GENERAL

We encourage you to be an informed, educated consumer who takes the ultimate responsibility for choosing your healthcare options. We are happy to provide you with any information we possess to help you reach this goal.

We believe all legitimate healthcare options have something to offer; different is not necessarily better or worse, but sometimes merely different. The key is to choose the best option for you; that best option is the one that gives you the results you want while conforming to the practical needs, requirements, and limitations of your particular situation.

We encourage you to ask questions and state your opinion about the healthcare services you receive anywhere.

OUR SERVICES

Our services are an on-going therapy program; we are not an emergency service.

We describe our program as a 50/50 therapy; that means we provide our half of the program that is our best, 100% effort to help you with your problem. It also means that the other 50% has to come from you. As with everything in life, the more you put into it, the more you get from it. This means that half of the burden for your progress is your responsibility. Some people do not want this responsibility; some people do not want to participate in their own healthcare. We recognize this and that is one reason we say that this therapy is not for everyone. That is not a good thing or a bad thing; that is a personal choice. As we said at the beginning, we want to help you make the choices that will work for you.

We are often asked, “How often and how long will I have to come?” You need to understand that your problem did not originate in an hour; it has not existed for an hour; and we cannot make it go away in an hour. Some of the variables involved in answering this question are: the nature of your problem; how long you have had this problem; your age and physical condition; and your goals for improvement. What we can say is that you should feel better after every session. Also, after 8 sessions or less you should know whether this therapy is working for you.

We are always happy to supply you with client references and information on our education and experience.

Massage is based upon an energy exchange; we are only able to do a finite number of massages each day and each week.

We never tell you not to do anything your doctor orders. We never claim to treat or cure. We never manipulate or adjust you. We do our very best to help you with your problem.

Depending upon your physical condition, you may be embarking on a system of movement / exercise. Please note:

1. Before starting any exercise program, please TALK TO YOUR DOCTOR FIRST.
2. The exercises demonstrated are for educational and informational purposes only. They are not meant to correct or rehabilitate any specific condition.
3. We make no implied claim on the actual health benefits of the exercises, because we cannot monitor and control the end-users. Rather the end-users may experience the results on a subjective level and decide for themselves the results obtained. Therefore, use the exercises at your own discretion. The end user agrees to waive any and all liability from the continued use, or experimental use, of the exercises.

Our insurance specifically excludes claims resulting from communicable diseases and specifically excludes HIV/ AIDS. Therefore, we are unable to provide services to people in these categories. Also, if you have any contagious, short-term illness, please do not come (cancel your appointment with 24 hours notice). This reduces everyone's exposure and is an expected courtesy.

On extremely rare occasions, you may experience some very slight soreness and/or bruising the day after a session. Again, this happens infrequently and is a minor, usually one time, affect.

Our therapy is for people who are willing/want to participate in their own healthcare. This means making a commitment to making your healthcare a priority.

We are a drugless therapy; an alternative to pharmaceutically based healthcare.

THE BUSINESS SIDE

Any information exchanged during a massage session is private and strictly confidential. We have an on-going demand for our services beyond our ability to provide them. Therefore, please cancel your appointment 24 hours in advance, or you will be charged the full appointment fee.

Please be aware that you reserve a specific time period. We do our very best to ensure that you do not have to wait for your appointment, and we are over 99% successful. Conversely, if you are late we cannot make subsequent clients wait, so your appointment will be finished at the designated time.

We charge a set fee per session; depending upon your problem, a session will be from 45 minutes to one hour; longer sessions will be charged accordingly.

In order to reduce costs, we do not bill. Payment is expected when services are rendered unless other arrangements have been made in advance.

If we are required to interact with an insurance company, you will be charged $125.00 for each hour (or portion thereof) for all time required.

There will be an additional $50.00 charge for after hours and weekend services when available.

We hope this has answered some of your questions. We look forward to helping you.

Date: Thu, 22 May 2003 From: kim p To: MARTIALARTSACADEMY@EXCITE.COM Subject: Fwd: My Story of Fibromyalia

MY STORY OF FIBROMYALGIA

Let me introduce myself and tell you about my life during the last 5 years. My name is Kim P. I am 32 years old. I am the mother of a 2 year old girl. My husband and I have been married almost 10 years. During those 10 years I have worked as a hairdresser at a local salon, working 8 to 10 hours a day, Tuesday through Friday. I would like to share with you how my life went from normal to a life of pain, depression and exhaustion. The names of the doctors have been changed, but all of the events are true.

On January 28, 1998, my husband and I were getting ready to have a Super Bowl Party. I cleaned and scrubbed the house until I started experiencing pain in my right arm. The pain ran down my arm and made my last two fingers go numb.

The next morning I went to County Quick Care to see if I had by chance seriously injured myself. Wouldn't that have been a great excuse to never clean house again? The doctor prescribed one round of prednisone because my arm was beginning to swell and the pain was constant. I was told to return if the pain did not subside.

After two weeks the swelling in my arm went down but the pain was still there. The pain was always worse after I had worked all day, to the point where I couldn't use my right arm to drive home. I returned to the doctor and he suggested I see an orthopedic specialist. In the meantime, I was prescribed another round of prednisone.

By the time I was able to see Dr. H., the orthopedic specialist, it was February 9 and the pain had continued to be bothersome. I only experienced numbness on occasion at this point.

Dr. H. examined me and determined the pain was actually coming from my neck and radiating down my arm. He thought it could also be a pinched nerve making my fingers go numb. He ordered x-rays done on my neck and upper back. The x-rays revealed a possible bulging or herniated disc in my neck. In order to determine if the diagnosis was correct an MRI was done on February 16, 1998.

The results of the MRI found there were three bulging discs in my neck and one herniated disc. Dr. H. felt I should also see a neurologist to determine if there was any nerve damage.

It was now March 2, 1998 and Dr. T., a neurologist, examined me and believed there was a possibility that damage had been done because of the numbness in my fingers. He ordered an EEG to determine the damage. The results found there was no damage. I was sent back to Dr. H.

At this point, I had increasing pain in my arm and right upper back and neck. The pain wouldn't ever go away no matter what type of pain killer or muscle relaxer I took. I was prescribed several different kinds. I woke up stiff and in pain but continued to work, never missing a day except for doctors appointments.

I had heard about the Pain Management Clinic through one of my clients. I asked Dr. H. if he thought that could help me. It seemed to me, at this point, Dr. H. didn't believe I could be in as much pain as I said I was. Reluctantly he referred me to the Pain Management Clinic and set up a time for me to go there. He also set up physical therapy for my neck and upper back. I started going to Pain Management on March 11.

While I was there, it was determined I had Fibromyalgia. Dr. G. of the Pain Management Clinic prescribed trigger-point injections to help the knotting in my muscles in my upper back and neck.

Physical therapy started about the same time as the Pain Clinic treatments did on March 12. I went to PT three times a week. I received moist-heat packs on my neck and back for 20 minutes then an ultrasound massage on my right side of my shoulder and neck. I then did exercises to strengthen my neck. At this time the pain was hard to deal with. By the end of the work day I was completely exhausted. My right arm hurt so bad I couldn't do anything but go home and collapse. A customer of mine told me after all the pain I was experiencing, child birth would be a piece of cake, I later found that to be true.

PT didn't seem to be helping. The trigger-point injections seemed to help with the knotting of my muscles, but it kept coming back. Over the period of about 4 or 5 weeks, I had about 20 trigger-point injections.

Summer was beginning and the pain was not as bad, but whenever it rained or the weather changed the pain was greater. I was tired all the time and unable to do anything besides going to work, doctors appointments and PT. Household chores were very painful for me. Lifting scrubbing and even bending over to pick up things were so painful. I felt like I had the aches and pains of the flu all the time. My day would start at 7:30 to go to PT or Pain Clinic and then straight to work until 7:00 or 7:30. I was exhausted every day.

My husband was very supportive through it all, although he didn't understand why none of the doctors couldn't seem to help me. He has told me since that time, he didn't truly understand the depth of the pain I was in until he caught me on the bathroom floor crying. I was overwhelmed with every thing that was happening. Doctors were telling me I would have to quit working, and I would never be able to have children because I wouldn't be able to take care of them.

One morning after my trigger-point injections, I told a co-worker I wasn't sure how much more pain I could stand. She asked me if I needed another pain killer and by 11:00am I had reached the maximum dose for a 24 hour period. I called Dr G. and the Pain Clinic and asked if there was anything else he could give me for my pain. They told me to take Aleve. I felt that was a slap in the face. As I got off the phone, my friend asked if she could pick up my prescription for me. All I could do was cry and tell her there was nothing to pick up. I left work early that day. It's still hard speaking of the pain I experienced that day. I want to block it out completely like I tried to do with the pain.

I gave up on the pain management and PT. Neither was helping. During the summer of 1998 the pain was a little better because of the heat. I continued to work as best I could.

On my birthday in September 1998, I treated myself to a massage. I went to a local salon. Hoping to have less pain at least for one day.

On September 28, I went back to Dr. H. to get my muscle relaxer refilled. At that visit I told him of my concern that I had to take muscle relaxers every night as well as pain killers every day even though they only took the edge off the pain. In fact the medicines I was taking only helped me to mentally deal with the pain. I also told him Dr. G had diagnosed me with Fibromyalgia. Dr. H. in turn told me to never tell another doctor I had Fibromyalgia because there was no such proof that it existed. If anything it was a mental disorder more than a physical one.

On October 6, I decided to go back to the Pain Clinic and Dr. G. He was at least sympathetic and didn't believe I was crazy. Dr. G. suggested epidural therapy to help block the pain. It could take up to three epidural to block the pain completely. I received the first on October 13, 1998. I took 2 days off work to recover, but after 2 days the pain was back.

On November 3, I went to receive the second epidural because I didn't get any relief from the pain. Dr. G. felt I could possibly have some infection in my bone, so a bone scan was ordered before another epidural was done. The results were normal and the second epidural was done the next day. Unfortunately, I still couldn't see any improvement in the pain.

On November 19 I went to receive the final epidural. Dr. G. decided since I wasn't improving, we should go back to the trigger-point injections. I did receive some relief from them but only a short period of time. Through November and December I got more trigger-point injections and also went to PT. It was as if I was only postponing my fate.

On December 14, I went for my annual physical. I told the doctor what I had been going through the past year. At that time, I had 44 trigger-point injections, 2 epidural, not to mention the x-rays, MRI, EEG, bone scan and medications. She suggested I go to the M.Clinic in Jacksonville, Florida. While examining me, she thought I had tendonitis in my right shoulder. She gave me a cortisone shot, and got me an appointment at Mayo in February, 1999. I felt like someone was finally going to do something about this.

At the M. Clinic, I saw Dr. C., a rheumatologist. He confirmed I had Fibromyalgia. He also believed most of my pain was coming from my shoulder. He said it could be a torn tendon in my rotator cuff. He wanted another MRI (this one of my shoulder) and more x-rays. He also wanted me to see Dr. M. an orthopedic doctor at the M. Clinic.

My husband and I went back to M. Clinic at the end of February. At this time I got the results of the x-rays and MRI. The tests confirmed Dr. C.'s diagnosis of the rotator cuff. Dr. M. agreed with Dr. C.'s diagnosis of the rotator cuff and Fibromyalgia. I finally felt I was on the right track and not just spinning my wheels.

Dr. M. ordered PT for my torn tendon on my rotator cuff as well as stretching techniques for the Fibromyalgia. He also said if the PT didn't help my rotator cuff, I would be looking at surgery.

After a month of PT, at a new physical therapist, I could tell my strength was returning. The pain was still fairly great, but because it had been over a year since I had been healthy, my body had become extremely weak. I remember the first time I opened a jar, I was so proud of myself.

In April 1999, I had a friend getting married and she asked me to fix everyone's hair for the wedding. I was honored she asked me, so I agreed. My mother-in-law came to help me that day. She knew it was going to take a lot out of me. The weekend before I fixed 6 girls for Prom and worked a full schedule all week. By Saturday, I was already in pain. It took everything out of me to do the hair for her wedding. In the end, I was not able to attend the wedding. The pain was so great, I went straight home and took two muscle relaxers and went to bed. It hurt me as much physically as it did emotionally. I wanted to be there, but I couldn't and that was devastating. I also was looking at a full schedule of clients and another Prom the next weekend. I considered getting a massage. I thought it would help me to get through the rest of the week.

I made an appointment at the same salon I had been to in September. Kathy Lescak was my therapist that day. Kathy and I sat down at the first session. I told her my story in a nutshell and what the many doctors had said. I was facing rotator cuff surgery, the possibility of having to quit the job I loved, not being able to have children. Not to mention dealing with a life time of pain with Fibromyalgia.

Kathy told me, she believed she could help me. I didn't know she would be able to help me change my way of life. The type of massage she practices is a combination of several techniques. She tailored the massage to my individual problems. Our first concern would be my shoulder and the torn tendon. Second, the issue of Fibromyalgia would take more time to deal with. She said we would try different techniques and see which one worked the best for me.

After the first session with Kathy, I couldn't believe the difference. It was the first time in 16 months I felt as though my life might have a chance to get back to some normalcy. I can't describe how much better I felt. It may sound strange, but it was the first time in months, I could work all day and feel well enough to cook supper.

Kathy used magnetic therapy behind my knees and on my arm to help my back and legs during the first session. Being a hairdresser and standing many hours a day, my back and legs will be another focus in my massage therapy. Kathy told me to get about 6 massages and if I didn't see any improvement then go ahead with surgery. I didn't have anything to lose.

I went back the next week for the second session. The magnetic therapy didn't seem to be working and I was still going to PT as well. Over the next few weeks I began to feel stronger. The pain was still there but life with it was becoming easier to deal with physically. My clients, friends and family were noticing the change in me. Every week, I was taking less and less medication for pain and muscle relaxers.

On June 2 1999, my husband and I returned to the Mayo Clinic to be reevaluated. Dr. M. said I would not need surgery, my rotator cuff had healed and now my total attention could focus on dealing with Fibromyalgia. He asked what I had been doing since my last visit. I told him about Kathy and the massage therapy. He was impressed with the difference in me in just a short period of time. He wanted me to see Dr. C. while I was at Mayo. Dr. M. wrote a prescription for aquatic therapy to help my muscles strengthen without stress on my joints. Dr. M. also encouraged me to continue my massage therapy. In fact, he wrote my insurance company on my behalf explaining the improvement in my health and the need for me to continue massage therapy. My insurance company declined the coverage. I hope one day they will realize the importance of massage therapy in helping to fight Fibromyalgia.

Through the years with Kathy, I have progressed to where I am virtually pain free. We have done several techniques as well as acupuncture. Gary, Kathy's husband, also does massage therapy, but with a lot more pressure. I have advanced enough to be able to take the pressure Gary gives out. It has been a tough road but one I could not have begun to walk down without massage therapy. I have tried different types of massage but none can even come close to helping me the way Kathy and Gary's method does. I would not have been able to have a child or raise one for that matter if I had not begun massage therapy.

I suffered many months going back and forth from one doctor to another because they were not sure how to treat me and my pain. Thank goodness there are some who will find help for you, if they are not sure the best road to take. Ultimately I am the one who took charge of my own well being with the help of Kathy and Gary. They have told me countless number of times if I had not done what they said for me to do my progression to wellness would not have been successful. At the height of my pain this is a list of some of the medications that were prescribed for me:

Cyclobenzaprine Naproxen Daypro Hydrocodone Darvocet
Ultram

It has been over 5 years since my new life began with Fibromyalgia. I will never forget the pain, tears and heartache it has caused. I continue to have problems now and again. I have been in 2 small car accidents and had a wonderful daughter. Through it all I had Kathy and Gary to help me deal with trials my body goes through. I have very few days of pain now. I have not taken a pain killer or muscle relaxer in years. I know I will always have to deal with Fibromyalgia, but my future is brighter and with their help, I am 98% pain free.

At the request of Kathy and Gary Lescak, I appreciate the opportunity to share my experience of pain and suffering with Fibromyalgia. I hope this will bring awareness and understanding of the disease.

To Gary and Kathy Lescak,

This month, May, I have been coming to you for three years and I thought it appropriate to send you an e-mail to let you know how much I appreciate all the help you two have given me.

If you can remember the first day I came to you I was dragging one leg, and pretty stooped over from the nerve damage I have and the deteriorating discs in my back. The Doctor who did the cervical fusion on me in 1993 had told my children that I had waited too long to have this surgery, and I would have permanent nerve damage, and I would be lucky if I could stay out of a wheelchair for the remainder of my life. I was not getting any better in the seven years since my surgery, and I had a few massages before seeing your ad in the paper, but I did not need a "feel good massage" so when I tried you out I knew that I had hit the jackpot. I must say, however, that the reality of your ability to help me have far exceeded my expectations of ever being in the shape that I am in today. I am medicine free, I walk at least a mile every day, I do the stretching exercises that you showed me to do for each specific part of my body. These exercises compliment the massages and give me the energy to have days full of doing all the things that everyone should be able to do.

I am a sixty year old grandmother and I amaze my children every day, and they remember that I am supposed to be in a wheelchair, especially when I am chasing my three and five year old grandchildren around.

You have helped me out a LOT, and do not think that I do not know that it was one of the luckiest days of my life when I drug myself up to see you for my first massage. It was most certainly not a "feel good massage", and it shouldn't be if it is to help. I thank you and I'll see you next week. Kathe S.

Jackie C

I'm Jackie C. My mother is Mildred S. and she is kindly known to her family and friends as Mim. Mim is 81 years old. She just turned 81 February the 17 of this year [2003]. About five and a half years ago, she was diagnosed with pancreatic cancer and had a very major surgery in New Orleans, Louisiana, which took her approximately from the end of July to the end of November to recuperate from. After that, the next month in December at Christmas, she came to visit us in Statesboro, Georgia, and has never left. She has been with us since then.

The first few years that she was with us, I became very aware and familiar with her illnesses. Several, you know, had already been diagnosed. One that was diagnosed after she moved here was a type of arthritis called polymyositis rheumatica. She also has a bulging disk at the end of her spine. She has scoliosis of the spine and she has osteoarthritis. Her polymyositis rheumatica was diagnosed by a doctor, Dr. S. in Savannah. His treatment for that illness was to give her heavy doses of prednizone for several months and then eventually when she got to a point where she was seeing relief from some of the symptom's he would gradually reduce the dosage. During this period of time when she was taking heavy doses of prednizone, she wound up with her hip just really being very, very painful. He, Dr. S., I speculated when he saw her last that she may have a mild fracture. But he was getting ready to go out of town, so he said even if it was a mild fracture it would probably not show up on an x-ray. We didn't see him again for several weeks for sure, possibly even months. In the mean time, she was experiencing a lot of pain from this whatever it was, which we didn't know at the time. In the process, we, in trying to get some relief from the pain in her hip, went to the pain management center at B. Memorial Hospital. She received over a period of possibly three months or so, a series of trigger point injections in the hip area, which helped to relieve the pain, but it didn't completely eliminate it. So, being very frustrated and still in pain, we kept searching for a diagnosis that was more accurate, that would help to relieve the pain. We were scheduled to go back to the pain management center. The doctor there told her that the trigger point injections were probably not addressing whatever was wrong, and he suggested that she go to an orthopedic surgeon, which we did...

We went to the orthopedic surgeon only to find out after being x-rayed that she did have a fractured hip, which she had been living with for a number of months. Anyway, he put her on crutches and within a period of a couple of months it had healed and she was walking fine and the pain in the hip and the leg area was eliminated. But the back pain was still there. We had heard about Kathy but had also heard about a new doctor, Dr. S., at B. Memorial in the pain management center. A friend of ours had heard him speak at a seminar and was very impressed with his presentation. So she suggested that we try him, which we did.

He decided to give my mother an injection in the spine, I think it was cortisone, which helped the pain for a few days, and very few, I want to say three, or four, maybe five at most. Then one morning, within the week, she woke up and her leg was numb from the knee down. Needless to say, we were in a panic. So I called him back and told him what the problem was. He brought my mother back in, looked at her and wrote her three prescriptions for, I guess two pain medications, and I don't know what the other one was, a muscle relaxer or whatever. These were the three prescriptions that he gave her; oxycodone, neuroton, and oxicoton. I think this was primarily designed to relieve whatever was there, the numbness, the pain in an interim period waiting for a further diagnosis. Within two or three days of begging to take these three prescriptions, my mother wound up, just completely zonked out. She was nauseated, just really almost listless. She went to bed and in a week's period of time, she was basically in bed except to get up and go to the bathroom periodically. She was basically not functioning. She was not eating very much, extremely weak and overmedicated. I was in contact with her primary physician, Dr. S., and the pharmacist. She was just seemingly getting weaker and weaker. We stopped the medications immediately when this occurred, and they all told me that it would probably take a few days because of her age for the medicines to get out of her system. I tried to wait patiently, and finally on the weekend, I called a friend of mine who is a nurse, and told her the situation, and asked her advice on what to do. She knew I was not happy with her primary physician, so she suggested I change physicians and she told me that she would probably need to be admitted to the hospital so she could get detoxed. Her electrolytes were probably all off balance.

So that's what I did, the next week I changed physicians, admitted her to the hospital, and tried to get her system back in balance. He sought the council and advice of several other physicians, the cardiologists. Actually, she had a past history of taking painkillers and mood altering drugs, so he called in at that period of time a psychiatrist, anyway this team of doctors to diagnose her situation and to try and get her back on her feet. We went through a week at the hospital, and she seemed like she was doing better, but still weak. So we went into the weekend, and on an early, very early, like in the middle of the night on Sunday morning, the hospital called me and told me to get over there, that the doctor on call thought she had had a heart attack, and he had done an electro cardiogram, or whatever it's called. He had diagnosed it and thought that, I mean he was just a general practitioner, but had thought that she had a heart attack. So, needless to say, rushed over there to find out what was going on. She just seemed that she had taken a turn for the worse, and so I tried to get as much information as I could on a weekend from whoever was there, nurses and doctors on call. Dr. S., her cardiologist, was out of town and wouldn't be back in town until Monday, so I was unable to contact him. I finally got a hold of her new primary care physician that afternoon after going through several hours of seeing her in a very, very weakened condition and thinking that she was going to die. Also getting that reassurance from the doctor on call that she was probably not going to make it through the day. I happened to see another physician that was making his rounds at B.Memorial who is a friend of ours, and I asked him what he would do and the idea of putting her in ICU was mentioned. Friends started rallying around and trying to give me advice and support, and the general consensus was that I should put her in ICU and let's see what happens, she had too much strength left to give up. So that's what we did, the orders were written and she was put in ICU that Sunday night. The attending physician, who was Dr. H. had called all the physicians concerned that had been seeing her and treating her the first week there, and the next day when Dr. S. got in, he gave her his evaluation also.

After Dr. H. had collected and gathered all the information that he could from the team of doctors that had been seeing her, and from her past history and records, we finally were able to speak with him the next day, on Monday, and wanted to know what the diagnosis was. He said overmedication, so she was treated for the next four days in ICU for overmedication, and improved enough over the next four days to be able to be moved from ICU to a regular floor. She stayed in the hospital probably for three or four more days and then was discharged. I spoke with Dr. H. as well as her primary care physician who was Dr. S., but in speaking with Dr. H. I was just delighted to hear that one of his recommendations for her, because she was still on a lot of pain medications for various reasons, was trying to detox her just to get her functioning. He told me that her back pain would certainly increase as the pain medication wore off, but that taking into consideration how receptive she was to prescription medications that his recommendation was that she address the back pain in some alternative therapy, such as massage therapy, acupuncture, and alternative medicines. So, at that point in time I thought it was a wonderful idea. I had kind of dabbled a little bit, especially over the last three years of dealing with my mother's illnesses, and her tendency to be comfortable and use or abuse prescription medications, that I thought that that was certainly a very healthy suggestion and advice, but my next question was what do we do and where do we go. We had tried during this process an acupuncturist, a doctor that had just got his certification in acupuncture in Savannah and that was not very successful. So anyway, Kathy's name came up again from the friend that originally told us about her before we went to the pain management center, and I gave Kathy a call and told her my mother's situation and asked her if she would be willing to work with her, which she most graciously agreed to do. So, this was actually several months after she was discharged from the hospital, which I want to say she was discharged some time in November around Thanksgiving. During this period of time, we had home health care, she had physical therapists coming, she was really getting detoxed, I mean psychologically she was really out of it. She was very weak, having to walk with a walker. I think it was probably about February where I also had sitters off and on so I could do some of the things I needed to do.

About February we felt that she was getting stronger psychologically as well as physically to be able to seek some help, and of course that's when I called Kathy and she agreed. I took her to Kathy's, and probably 25 pounds lighter than what she is right now, walking with a walker and still psychologically not her old self, but better. On the way to Kathy's, she wasn't talking very much at this time, she expressed some apprehension by saying that she had talked to some of the home health nurses and told them that she was going to be going to a massage therapist, and they must have been chit-chatting about it. She was apprehensive about the fact that massage therapists, she heard, lit candles. So she expressed her apprehension, and I just responded with the fact that we light candles at the house also, and let's go ahead and try to see where this leads us and if it doesn't work then we'll stop, but let's at least give it a try. Well I don't know if that relieved any of her apprehensions or fears, but we did keep the appointment. She at that time was hyperventilating frequently, and when Kathy put her on the table for her massage therapy, she was unable to keep her head in the little headrest that has a hole in it. She was very fearful about that experience, but did it. I don't remember what Kathy's recommendation was at first; I want to say for her to come once a week.

Kathy told me that what she was going to be doing was massaging the soft tissue and giving her basically massage therapy. I think it was not long after Mim had started going for the massage therapy that Kathy decided to try acupuncture on her. She had had acupuncture several years ago, in Louisiana for a year or two, which had been very effective for her back pain, but then she stopped. So anyway, she started going regularly only to find out that it was the massage therapy and the acupuncture that were helping. She got stronger physically, psychologically and eventually did away with the walker, and Kathy got her on a regemen and felt that the most effective thing for her situation was for her to come three days a week. That's what she's been doing the last three years. We have talked, Kathy and I have talked, she certainly worked with my mom, and talks with her all the time about her situation and about things that she can do, recommendations for her to just keep mobile, keep the muscles and tissues more flexible and pliable. In the process of getting to this point, she had been to a couple of orthopedic surgeons who had evaluated her situation and looked at her MRI's, and looked at her and seen her walk into the office, and two doctors in particular, two orthopedic surgeons, commented that if they had only looked at her records and her MRI's and not seen her sitting there in front of them that they would've thought she would've been in a wheelchair. So, she's got a very strong spirit of determination and was very physically active all her life, so has a lot of strength. But anyway, this massage therapy, acupuncture, and being on alternative medications has just truly changed her life and her attitude. She is not free of pain, Kathy as well as the orthopedic surgeon says that her bulging discs have deteriorated to the point where even surgery would not completely alleviate the pain. So, what Cathy is doing helps out in stretching and keeping the tissue pliable, soft. It's just maintaining her situation and trying to help her in dealing with the pain and keep her moving and it's working. She now drives, she's still driving, she drives herself to therapy. Three days a week she'll drive around town, and has even gone out of town on occasion to Jacksonville to pick up our oldest daughter from the airport, or to Savannah to get a hair cut. So she's still driving, and walks without a walker or cane, and leans to one side and can't go long distances, but she is still walking. The people that know her and don't see her often, whenever they do see her, the comments that I usually hear are that she looks wonderful and great, and she really does. Her mental attitude is so much better than it was when she arrived five and a half years ago. She's even gotten to the point where we went to the doctor for an upper respiratory infection several months ago, and Dr. B. gave her a prescription to address that. We got back home and she took it for a couple of days and she complained to me one day, she said I don't know if I'm taking this anymore and that it makes me feel light-headed, I don't like feeling woozy, and I think I'm going to ask Kathy if there is anything else I can take in place of this. So I just thought that this was tremendous from someone who would ask frequently for prescription medication, pain medications, whatever, ... to saying now that if she could use something alternatively she would certainly do that or try that. Needless to say we are very pleased with the treatment. It has worked with her situation and hope it will continue to do so to keep her quality of life as it is now. Kathy and I have spoken, we do frequently, and she says that if she were not receiving this type of therapy that she would probably be in a wheel chair right now. We are very, very grateful and she is just really, really doing well considering her illnesses.

From: Sean Sills    To: martialartsacademy@excite.com    Subject: My experience

In the summer of 1996, I was involved in an all terrain vehicle accident. I suffered a fracture at the T5 and T6 vertebrae, fractured left shoulder and right knee. The orthopedic surgeon placed me in a type of upper body brace to keep my vertebrae aligned and pressure off of the fractured ones. I spent approximately 8 weeks in this device. The surgeon decided that it was best not to perform surgery on my shoulder but my knee had to be repaired. Of course, during this time, I was on painkillers. I thought that those 8 weeks were rough but nothing could compare to what followed.

Following the recuperation period, I began to suffer many different symptoms. First was a loss of sensation in my legs. One morning I went to get out of bed to get ready for work and I collapsed. The only sensation that I could feel was severe numbness. They both felt as if they were heavy as if they were encased in concrete.

I developed an obvious tremor in both hands. When I would try to perform a task with my hands, I would begin to shake. It was very frustrating. I began to worry at this point. My back pain at the T5/T6 was extreme. I would literally cry myself to sleep from the pain. I was referred to a neurologist for the severe back pain, numbness in my legs and hand tremors. I was put through a very intensive series of tests to try and find the problem. The entire process of testing covered a span of 3 years.

I literally had a team of neurologists working on these problems. I cannot begin to remember how many MRI's and spinal taps that I went through not to mention the other tests. My team of neurologists was not all in the same practice. Each had a specialty therefore; they were located in different places. Each one would prescribe a different medication for the specific problem. I was taking high doses of Neurontin and Oxycontin just to name a few. Each time a drug did not work, a different one was prescribed. Imagine having a team of physicians and each one is prescribing something different.

All of the tests that were performed could not find a cause for the numbness in my legs or the tremors in both hands. We all knew why my back was hurting though but the doctors could not offer me any hope except to take more medicine, especially painkillers. It was almost impossible to even work while on so much medicine. The only definite diagnosis given was fibromyalgia.

Then I was introduced to a chiropractor. After several visits, I promised myself that I would never return. It literally scared me how they would “smash” my vertebrae into place. I would leave there hurting more than when I arrived.

I then developed a gastrointestinal bleed. I was referred to a GI physician and he began performing numerous scopes to track down the bleed. Part of the cause for the GI bleed was from so much medication that I was taking for my other problems. Then came the rest of the news. I was then told that the doctor believed that I was in the early stages of Crohn’s disease. I was then sent to John Hopkins University in Maryland to see a Crohn’s specialist. After going through his round of tests, he seemed to agree with the initial diagnosis but wanted more testing performed. Guess what? I was given even more medicine now to fight the Crohn’s disease. By this time, I felt like a lab rat. I had been stuck so many times with needles that I finally reached a point of hopelessness. I really thought that I could not win.

All of the above took place over a 3-year time frame. I was being juggled from physician to physician. I spent many hours in a doctor’s office. I was tired of being told that they could not find a reason and then given more prescriptions. The cost of the physicians and prescriptions was astronomical. At this point, I did not see relief in the future. I was practically unable to work for all the medicines. Near the end of the ordeal, I was on 40 plus pills per day. I was tired. I was scared. I was desperate.

My parents urged me to meet Gary and Kathy Lescak at Power of Touch. Even though I was skeptical about going to them, I was willing to do anything to stop the pain.

They started me on acupuncture and deep tissue massage immediately. Within 3 months, I was barely taking any medication for pain. Within 6 months, I was pill free. I have been a client of theirs for 3 years and have not had a single problem during that time. I am able to be on a once a month maintenance massage schedule. The acupuncture and deep tissue massage gave me my life back. It had been so long since I felt normal. I could not believe how Gary and Kathy accomplished what an entire team of physicians could not do and they did it medicine free.

I was so impressed with the results that I decided in January 2004 to make this my career. I am now a student under the tutelage of Gary and Kathy Lescak. I was able to witness first hand how they achieved what modern western medicine could not and then restore normalcy to my life. I am a believer.

Long Distance Clients

Many people who live far from us, ask if we can recommend anyone who does this type of therapy. Unfortunately, the answer is usually “no.” One reason for this is that, until recently, the Okazaki style of Restorative Massage Therapy / Seifhukujitsu was almost exclusively taught to senior Dan Zan ryu jujitsu practitioners; most of whom did not practice it professionally, but solely in a martial arts context. The second reason is that this is our own unique, eclectic therapy program based upon our more than 86 (combined) years of experience.

However, although it is not the optimum scenario, we have a number of long distance clients who come for intensive, short periods of therapy (1 - 2 times per day from 4-5 days to 2 weeks; etc.) on a regular basis. These people come from as far as Montana, Kentucky, North Carolina, and Florida, and feel the results achieved are worthwhile.

The extent of results and the speed with which results are achieved are always dependent upon a variety of factors such as: nature, duration, and severity of the problem, age, overall physical condition, etc.

Please call or email us if you would like to discuss this option.
